A Message from our Founder

2024 was another exciting year for FCP Wines, and I want to extend my sincere thanks to all our customers for their continued support. During our peak periods, we are delivering over 20,000 bottles per week using our own dedicated fleet of vans.

As we look ahead, we remain focused on the two core values that FCP Wines was founded on: Offering the most exceptional and exclusive wines from around the world whilst delivering industry-leading and personalised customer service. These principles are unwavering and despite the current economic uncertainty and the challenges of the new duty system, I remain committed to ensuring they are always delivered to our customers.

New for 2025, I believe it is more important than ever to have the right wines at the right price point to encourage consumers to spend with you. That's why, in this portfolio, we are introducing some outstanding new wineries that we believe will support your business and perfectly complement our existing portfolio.

We are continuing to invest in our delivery fleet, and our dedicated online trade portal makes ordering simple and efficient. If you are not yet making use of this, please speak to your Account Manager for more information. Our stock management software and delivery planning tools ensure a more efficient distribution network while maintaining optimum stock levels. We remain committed to ensuring you have the right wines exactly when you need them.

This latest portfolio offers our most competitive and exciting wine selection to date. Our sales team, all WSET qualified, are passionate about introducing our wines and sharing their expertise with you to create bespoke solutions that support your business.

We are always on hand to help and look forward to working with you in 2025 as your preferred wine supplier. I would like to wish you every success for the year ahead.

Tom Ellis,
Founder & Managing Director

Committed to Excellence

16 Years of Experience

Founded back in 2007, FCP Wines stands on two key values: Offering the most exceptional and exclusive wines from around the world, whilst providing industry leading and personalised customer service.

Dedicated Account Managers

As standard, all our customers will be allocated a passionate WSET qualified Trade Account Manager who will be available to you for all your wine related needs and support.

Closest to Our Growers

We work very closely with our producers and growers many of which are similar minded, family owned companies with the same passion, attention to detail and ethos of offering the very best quality and value for money.

Quality Wines

Our trading partners are situated in the best wine producing regions around the world. From larger producers through to small niche wineries, the emphasis has always been on using the best quality grapes for our wines.

2007 - Inception: First Class Products was founded by Tom Ellis, importing small producer Champagne into the UK while studying Geography at Exeter University.

2008 - Oxford - The Garage: Following the success of supplying many of the University Colleges in Oxford, the First Class Products van was no longer capable of keeping up with demand and so we started working out of Tom's garage in Oxford to hold more stock.

2011 - The Castle: Our first wine promotion event held at the Oxford Castle to promote our fantastic wine selection.

2009 - Digital Frontier: Swiftly becoming an established brand in the Oxford wine market, our sole imported small producer Leroux-Mineau was launched into the national scene with its very own website and home delivery.

2010 - Prosecco: Following the trends in the UK wine market, it was clear that we needed to make space for an excellent Prosecco in our sparkling wine portfolio. It was here that our relationship began with small producer Drusian in the heart of the Valdobbiadene Hills, Northern Italy. We now stock their award winning DOCG Prosecco amongst other wines.

2017 - Osney Mead: First Class Products emerged into the world of on-trade wine supply from our first warehouse in Oxfordshire.

Our Story

2019 - Abingdon: Barton Lane - The decision was made to move into our Barton Lane warehouse, a bigger, better distribution centre capable of supplying our ever-growing customer base in Oxfordshire and beyond.

2020 - A New Look: Re-branding to FCP Wines - With the focus on wine becoming the centre of our business, we decided that our brand should reflect this. 'FCP Wines' was born.

2021 - Wine Man: Following huge success supplying wine to the Oxfordshire area we acquired 'The Wine Man' a trade wine supplier operating in Berkshire.

2022 - Wickwar: Further expansion sees the acquisition of another wine business near Bristol and our distribution now covers much of the South of England.

2025 - Future: With daily deliveries to London, Reading, Oxford, Bath, Bristol and Cheltenham. Significant investment is made to our route planning and stock management software. Our new Trade Portal is launched offering customers fast and convenient online ordering.

Organic Wines

Let's start with the broadest term, Organic wine. Much like other types of organic farming, organic wine simply means that the grapes have not been sprayed with pesticides, fungicides or any other kind of synthetics and chemicals.

This is an important step on the way to more sustainable farming as chemicals used in conventional wine making can deteriorate soil quality, meaning that a range of biodiversity in the vineyard is unable to flourish. The result is that the vine is effectively disconnected from the soil it is growing on – it may as well be grown in a lab. Organic wine is typically certified, however, this does not have any bearing on how the wine is actually made in the cellar.

Bio-dynamic Wines

Bio-dynamic Wine takes the idea of organic farming to the next level. Bio-dynamic farming not only aims to produce grapes organically it also includes the usage of bio-dynamic preparations, such as composts made from organic matter that enriches the vineyard and surrounding soil.

This ethos views the vineyards as a whole ecosystem, in which each life form, be it great or small, has an important part to play in the wine that is bottled, for example, animals are allowed to roam freely through the vines. Bio-dynamic certification does work within certain guidelines as to what is allowed to be done to the wine in the cellar, however, interventionist practices and additives can still be added.

Vegan & Vegetarian Wines

With more and more people adopting a vegan lifestyle over the last few years, the question “what is vegan and vegetarian wine?” is one that we commonly come across. So we thought we’d explain it.

It’s completely logical to think that all wine must surely be vegan. It is, after all, a drink that’s made from pressing and fermenting grapes! While the wine itself is completely fruit-based, it’s the production techniques used in the winery that can turn a vegan-friendly blend into one that vegans would want to avoid. So, at what point during wine making can a wine become non-vegan? Well, it all comes down to the fining agents that are used to bring more clarity to the wine.

Fermentation is the part of the wine making process where the natural sugars of the grapes are converted into alcohol. The fruit juice goes into a fermentation tank where yeast grows, the yeast triggers the reaction in the sugar, resulting in wine at the end of it. It’s at this stage that molecules can appear in the wine, causing it to be hazy in appearance. These molecules can be phenolics, tartrates or even the presence of tannins (if it’s a red wine).

All of these molecules are natural by-products of the wine making process and are completely harmless to consume. So there’s actually nothing wrong with drinking a cloudy wine. However, in a world where aesthetics really matter, winemakers know that they can’t ship their wine without it being crystal clear in appearance. And the only way to do this is by extracting the molecules using fining agents.

Many of the fining agents that were traditionally used contained animal products. For red wine, it has historically always been egg whites (known as albumen), while for white wine it was milk protein (known as casein).

Once the fining process has been complete, the agents used are removed. So, whether that’s the egg whites or milk protein, once they’ve done their job they are removed from the finished product. However, due to the nature of wine, tiny traces of the animal product can be absorbed, thus making it non-vegan. It’s important to remember that the likes of albumen and casein are processing agents, not additives to the wine, so they may not be clearly listed on the label.

FCP Wines Definitions

All wines which are confirmed as suitable for vegans and vegetarians are denoted with symbols throughout this portfolio, we can also provide a full list of wine details upon request. Our portfolio is updated regularly to reflect changes to this with each vintage.

Vegan Wine

No additives or fining agents derived from animal products may be used. These include gelatin, isinglass, egg albumen and casein.

Vegetarian Wine

No additives or fining agents derived from animals may be used. These include gelatin, isinglass. Egg albumen and casein can be used as animal derived products.

ENGLAND

The best regions for viticulture are along the southern strip of England's coast. From Cornwall to Kent, similar climates and soil types allow growth of an array of cool-climate grape varieties.

The English have historically preferred drinking wine over producing it. However, the past decade has witnessed a dramatic shift, with England emerging as a prominent force in the global wine scene. The country is now renowned for its exceptional sparkling wines, winning prestigious awards and surpassing major Champagne houses in competitions. This success has earned English wines well-deserved recognition worldwide.

While some still wines are produced, it is the traditional method of sparkling wine production that truly captivates attention, accounting for over 65% of all English wine made.

It was the vision of farmer Martin Vickers 30 years ago to plant a vineyard that would one day match continental sites. Today, 30 acres of vines are managed by Martin and produce award-winning wines crafted by his son Clive. The Estate is situated 250ft above sea level in well-sheltered south facing slopes, with light, sandy free-draining soil.

“It was my vision to create a vineyard on a par with continental sites. I am really proud of the quality of vines we grow today.”

FOLC0001

£12.99

"A vibrant, upbeat English still Rosé made by blending Pinot Noir, Pinot Meunier, Chardonnay, Bacchus, Reichensteiner, Schönburger and Dornfelder sourced from family-run vineyards in Kent and East Sussex. Plenty of summer berries, ripe peach and elderflower on the nose, crisp acidity refreshes a palate of raspberry and lime zest, with ripe strawberry coming through on the finish. A vegan wine in a characterful bottle, perfect with a BBQ or drinking by the poolside"

FRANCE

France remains a significant wine producer, generally between 50 and 60 million hectoliters annually, though output fluctuates. While still considered a leader in fine wine, it shares the stage with rising global producers. The UK continues to import substantial amounts of French wine, though the precise proportion of total imports varies. The Appellation d'Origine Contrôlée (AOC) system remains the highest classification, ensuring quality through region-specific regulations. France's established wine culture continues to influence the world, even as trends like sustainable practices and natural wines gain traction.

GERMANY

German white wines offer diverse styles, from light and slightly sweet to dry and complex. While sweeter wines like Liebfraumilch have declined in popularity, dry styles, particularly Riesling, are increasingly favoured due to climate change and evolving tastes. Germany produces quality dry whites. These wines, reflecting regional diversity and sustainable practices, are versatile for various occasions and food pairings.

Germany's reputation is primarily based on wines made from the Riesling grape variety, which at its best, is used for aromatic, fruity and elegant white wines that range from very crisp and dry to well-balanced, sweet and of enormous aromatic concentration.

ITALY

Italy, with an annual production of nearly 5 billion litres, remains one of the two giants of global wine production alongside France. The vine's introduction to Italy dates back to 800 BC, courtesy of Greek settlers who found the rugged terrain to their liking. They christened Italy 'Oenotria' or 'land of the vine,' and by the time the Western Roman Empire collapsed in AD 476, every modern European region of production, with the exception of Bordeaux, had been established.

Spanish wines continue to fly under the radar. What is surprising, is that Spain is the third largest producer of wine with the largest land area dedicated to vineyards in the world! (2.4 million acres)

Spain boasts a rich wine making history, tracing back to Roman times, and remains a significant global producer. While Spain possesses a larger vineyard area than both France and Italy, its annual wine production is comparatively lower. This discrepancy stems from lower vine density in many regions and the challenges posed by the arid climate.

Key Grapes: Tempranillo, Albariño, Garnacha, Verdejo, Macabeo, and Viura.

AUSTRALIA

The Australian wine industry is a significant contributor to its economy through production, employment, export and tourism.

The first governor of New South Wales recognised the potential for wine making on his arrival in 1788. From the first plantings, vineyards have now spread to every state in Australia. The transformation of Australian wines has been rapid and it is now recognised in many markets as a significant producer of quality wines. This has been the result of heavy investment, from both within and outside the country in both the planting of vineyards and construction of wineries with modern equipment.

Key Grapes: Shiraz, Chardonnay, Cabernet Sauvignon & Merlot.

NEW ZEALAND

New Zealand ranks among the top wine-producing nations, recognised for its high-quality wines and innovative viticulture. While precise figures on foreign ownership fluctuate, international investment remains significant in the New Zealand wine industry. As the domestic market is relatively small, the industry heavily relies on exports, with key markets including Australia, the United States, and the United Kingdom.

The wine regions of South Africa are spread out over the Western and Northern Cape regions, covering 500 kilometres (310 mi) west to east and 680 kilometres (420 mi) north-south.

When we talk about New World vineyards, it is easy to overlook the fact that wine has been made continually in South Africa for some 350 years. The first vines were planted in 1655 in the Cape. Currently there are about 95,605 hectares under vine, with 10% of that area specifically planted with grapes for distillation - though many of the other plantings could be considered dual purpose. As well as the grapes used for wine and brandy production, a considerable portion are used for grape juice and grape concentrate.

NORTH AMERICA

The United States, while having a relatively short history in wine making compared to many other major players, has rapidly become a significant force in the industry. As of 2023, the U.S. ranks fourth globally in wine production, with wineries operating in every state. While known for a wide range of varieties, Chardonnay and Cabernet Sauvignon are particularly prominent. California, with its Mediterranean-like climate, is ideally suited for producing robust red wines. However, the coastal regions, influenced by fog rolling in from the Pacific Ocean, also excel in cultivating cooler-climate grapes such as Chardonnay, Sauvignon Blanc, and Pinot Noir.

Justin McManis, Tanya McManis Heuvel, and son-in-law Dirk Heuvel, the fifth generation of family farmers, all work full time at McManis Family Vineyards. The McManis family has been growing grapes in this region for five generations.

ARGENTINA

Argentina boasts a wine making history spanning over 450 years and currently holds its position as the fifth-largest wine producer globally. Like many facets of Argentine culture, its wine production has roots in Spain, dating back to the Spanish colonisation of the Americas when vine cuttings were first introduced to Santiago del Estero in 1557. Grape cultivation and wine making subsequently spread from there to neighbouring regions and eventually throughout the country. With the notable exceptions of vineyards in Río Negro and Neuquén, the majority of Argentina's vineyards are situated at elevations of 600 meters or more above sea level.

CHILE

The production of Chilean wine has been taking place for centuries. Within the last decade, cheap prices and foreign influence have transformed Chile into one of the largest exporters in the world market.

45

Chilean wine boasts a rich history for a New World wine region, dating back to the 16th century when Spanish conquistadors introduced vines during their colonisation. In the mid-19th century, French varieties like Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, and the rediscovered Carmenère were brought to Chile, further shaping its wine landscape.

Today, Chile stands as South America's leading and largest wine exporter, with approximately 118,000 hectares under vine. The grape varietal split is roughly 75% red and 25% white. Chile benefits from unique geographical and climatic conditions, providing advantages over other wine-producing countries.

Portugal has two wine-producing regions protected by UNESCO as World Heritage: the Douro Valley Wine Region (Douro Vinhateiro) and Pico Island Wine Region (Ilha do Pico Vinhateira). Portugal has a big variety of local grapes, producing a very wide selection of different wines with distinctive personality. Douro wine (Vinho do Douro) originates from the same region as port wines. In the past they were considered to be a bitter tasting wine. In order to prevent spoilage during the voyage from Portugal to England. Today's Douro table wines are enjoying growing favour in the world, maintaining many traits that are reminiscent of a port wine.

SPARKLING & CHAMPAGNE

The most northern vineyard area of France, the Champagne region lies North-East of Paris, its heart in the form of a double fish-hook, with the valley of the River Marne as its shank. The three main vineyard concentrations are the Vallée de la Marne, the Montagne de Reims and the Côte des Blancs. Champagne is a sparkling wine produced from grapes grown in the Champagne region of France following rules that demand secondary fermentation of the wine in the bottle to create carbonation. Some use the term Champagne as a generic term for sparkling wine, but the majority of countries reserve the term exclusively for sparkling wines that come from Champagne and are produced under the rules of the appellation.

Key Grapes: Pinot Noir, Pinot Meunier, and Chardonnay

Decanter

“Delightfully pale and frothy, this stylish Prosecco shows traditional flavours of pear and apricot along with a dash of sweetness. Very subtle underlying creamy notes lend texture and depth to this classic example”

SWEET & FORTIFIED

The UK's dessert wine market has improved dramatically in recent years. New, more reasonably priced and innovative wines from the New World have meant that it is no longer only those wealthy enough to buy French Sauternes who can enjoy a glass of sweet wine with their dessert, these wines are now far more accessible. Sales of dessert wines in restaurants can be increased with minimal effort and without affecting sales in other areas.

Key Grapes: Riesling, Sémillon, Grenache

BLENHEIM PALACE

Natural Mineral Water

First Class Products is located within the historic University city of Oxford and we are committed to working with local suppliers wherever possible. Within the majestic settings of Blenheim Palace an ancient spring has been supplying natural mineral water to King, Queen, Duke & Duchess for Centuries.

The superior quality was discovered by King Henry II when he hid his secret love at Blenheim and built her a pleasure pool by the side of the lake. To this day Rosamund's Well remains as a poignant reminder of this fatal love - for the jealous Queen discovered the King's lover in her bower and stabbed her to death! The Palace is home to the 11th Duke of Marlborough, and birthplace of Sir Winston Churchill.

Blenheim water is available for wholesale and consumer purchase nationally and internationally and is the preferred choice for many prestigious restaurants and hotels. First Class Wines is the main distributor of Blenheim water both in Oxfordshire and around the UK.

Riedel Glassware Range

Founded in 1756 and pioneering varietal-specific stemware since 1958, RIEDEL has become the brand of choice for wine connoisseurs and drink specialists, hospitality professionals and consumers globally.

Known for the creation and development of varietal-specific stemware RIEDEL Crystal was the first in history to recognise that the taste and aroma of a beverage is affected by the shape of the vessel from which it is consumed. It has been recognised for its revolutionary designs complementing alcoholic beverages and other drinks.
